

Chris Adval Productions

Terms & Conditions - Commercial Video Production

- A. Bidding/Quotes: When we provide quotes on your bids or jobs you have interest in hiring Chris Adval Productions, you are provided a non-exclusivity quote. Most clients do not need exclusivity and licensing the content created we worked on for your project is most cost efficient. We can provide exclusivity WORK-FOR-HIRE.
- B. License Usage: Clients are expected to purchase licensing with their service orders in producing completed projects. Once license has expired you will receive a reminder email 1 month before expiration, and when it expires. If not renewed, it is expected by the client to stop usage until renewal is paid in full. All content produced for the client at non-exclusivity rates, are owned by Chris Adval Enterprises unless discussed with a work-for-hire agreements.
- C. Pricing: Pricing is built by skills of creative professionals, labor, and gear used for production. Invoicing will be separated into two different invoices. First invoice is pre-production, and production. 25-50% non-refundable deposit expected to start pre-production and book production dates. The remaining amount for this first invoice must be paid in full 1 day before production starts. The second invoice will be based on hours spent on editing during post production, and licensing fees.
- D. Client Loaned Gear: In some instances clients may have their own gear for which we can use to help reduce some production and gear rental costs. In these instances it is expected by the client when providing any kind of gear to use during production to ensure the gear is fully ready to use by production time. i.e. charging all batteries, tested all gear is in working condition. Also ensure to have a sufficient amount of batteries or lighting if providing lights to use. In instances the client did not properly prepare with loaned gear, the client is fully responsible for the cost of lost production days including financially responsible. If the solution would be to do a last minute rental, and postponing the production, the client is charged accordingly. i.e. Our crew shows up to production days on client promised loaned gear, and if loans gear does not meet our expectations, client is still expected to pay in full for that day of production even while production crew is unable to perform their duties due to client's negligence.
- E. Roles: These roles mentioned are vital. You may hire me to perform these roles or you, as client, may assume responsibility for one or few of these roles.

Producer: The client is automatically assumed as producer, but when the client wants to put full control into me to be hired as the producer, you are allowed this too as the client. When clients hire me as producer you acknowledge I am in full control of finalizing the project and given full trust in me as producer.

In other instances when a client is maintaining a producer role, producer is responsible in all roles unless hiring other crew members not related to direct filming crew to handle this duty such as assistant producer, staff management, etc. Chris Adval Productions would assume roles of at least Director or Assistant Director and assign camera operator(s), audio tech(s), grip(s), lighting specialist(s), etc. direct roles to filming.

F. Deliverables: Final deliverables will be provided to the client once all invoices has been paid in full. This will also mean licensing must be paid in full for those that are not a work-for-hire client. Once paid, I will deliver via digital download for the finalized content approved by the client. Once finalized the client may not opt for additional edits and production will be marked as completed post. In extreme measures re-opening completed productions as another version. To reopen a completed post client is expected to discuss reopening fees. Client may re-open up to 90 days after completed post, once 90 days has passed the production is archived.

If a client needs a physical item holding the finalized content, I can provide USB or Hard Drive with the data. Varying on your needs there will be a fee for these. If transferring to your data device there is a fee on this as well.
